

Just because I can't talk, doesn't mean I don't have anything to say.

About Holly and Eileen Forlenza

Holly Forlenza

Holly Forlenza is unable to speak, diagnosed at age 2 with “severe mental retardation”, yet miraculously at the age of 22, broke the veil of silence by communicating with a keyboard and iPad, laboriously pecking one letter at a time. Holly wrote an anthem of love in a song she titled, God Will Sing You Home. In addition, Holly published a book titled, Just Because I Can't Talk Doesn't Mean I Don't Have Anything to Say. Holly is now dedicating her life to giving voice to the voiceless, promoting a message of love, kindness and strength.

Eileen Forlenza

Eileen Forlenza is Holly's mother. Eileen is a motivational speaker, leader and performer recognized nationally for her work on self empowerment and leadership. Inspiring audiences for over twenty years, Eileen now partners with her daughter Holly to share a powerful message of perseverance and never ending love.

In recognition of her achievements, Eileen received a personal invitation from the White House by President Obama in July 2010, and was also awarded the prestigious Woman of the Year Award from the National Association of Professional Women.
